On the occasion of March 8th, the International Women's Day, the Women's Committee of the National Council of Resistance of Iran invites you to its annual conference

Solidarity with Iranian women – Towards change in 2013

While the Middle East is passing through a historical change, Islamic fundamentalism has overshadowed the bright horizon of the world. Over the past three decades, the clerical regime in Iran with its misogynist characteristic, has tortured and executed thousands of women activists for their beliefs and perseverance. But the Iranian women have resisted and stood up against religious fascism ruling Iran and nationwide institutionalized suppression with great bravery. They are eager for freedom and equality. The very same women who were the inspiring engine for street protests of millions of Iranians in 2009 uprising, and were brutally suppressed by the mullahs in front of the stunned eyes and silence of the world community, did not fade away.

Resistance women in camps Liberty and Ashraf, in a lengthy and hard struggle, playing leadership roles in the Iranian resistance, were able to register the deserving position of women in the Iranian resistance movement and have become role models for the Iranian women's struggle.

The Women's Committee of the National Council of Resistance of Iran holds its traditional yearly event on the occasion of March 8th, the International Women's Day, on March 9th in Paris titled "Solidarity with Iranian women – Towards change in 2013". This conference is held with the participation of a large number of representatives of women, politicians, personalities and women activists from across Europe, North America and the Muslim world.

The Women's Committee of the National Council of Resistance of Iran invites you to join the international call for regime change in Iran and support 1000 leading resistance women in Liberty and Ashraf by your participation in this conference.

Date: Saturday, 9 March 2013 - 14.30
