After last 2024 successful edition, we have great pleasure to invite you to

7th European Conference Future of Biofuels taking place on 29-30 October 2025 in Gothenburg, Sweden.

The evolving landscape of EU regulations, market dynamics, and technological advancements presents both challenges and opportunities for stakeholders in the biofuel industry. In response to these regulatory changes, the European biodiesel market is expected to navigate increasing volatility in vegetable oil prices while adapting to the rising demand for renewable fuel sources. These regulatory adjustments are pivotal in addressing concerns over the carbon footprint of current biofuels and advancing the adoption of low-carbon alternatives, which will be essential for the EU to meet its Net Zero targets. As we look ahead, the biofuel industry stands at a crossroads, balancing the need for greater sustainability with the demands of economic competitiveness and energy security. The next few years will be critical in determining how biofuels evolve within Europe's broader green energy strategy.

Site Visit

The day before the main event, on 28th October 2025, a limited number of conference participants will have a unique opportunity to visit Södra Cell Värö which is managed by Södra.

During the visit you'll hear from Södra representatives, who'll provide detailed insights into their work. Värö is situated on the Värö peninsula in Varberg municipality, some 60 kilometres south of Gothenburg. Its proximity to our members' forests in western Sweden minimises transport distances for raw materials, while shipping the finished pulp from the West Coast optimises transportation to international customers.

Register your attendance for the participant list when booking for the event. There is no extra charge, the spaces are allocated on first come, first served basis.
