

Hello

Foreign doctors who are currently in Denmark for the authorization of their medical diplomas, that the majority of them have had a lot of scientific experience in clinics and hospitals in their country, and have come here to work in medicine and build a better future for themselves and their families, but until they fully learn the Danish language, which takes about 3 years, they do not have the right to work in the medical field but to support the costs of their families , they are working in low-level general jobs unrelated to their expertise and experience .

Since foreign doctors stay away from the medical profession for several years, they suffer from depression and futility and at last so many of them mandatory leave Denmark with depress mood.

To solve this issue, it is suggested to the Danish government and parliament to allow foreign doctors to take MEDICAL EQUIVALENCY EXAMS in ENGLISH , if possible, because fortunately the majority of Danes are fluent in English, and if they pass the examination with scores approved by the Ministry of Health DPSA , they can enter the Danish medical and health system and work under the supervision of DPSA supervisor doctors , so that they can also master the Danish language during this time.

Sincerely

Siavoush Hessari
